SPROTT HOUSE – DUNCAN LODGE SENSORY GARDEN PROJECT

Dementia is a growing concern worldwide. Providing the right external environment as well as an internal environment is seen as being critical by leaders in the dementia field and for this reason Sprott House is continuing to develop its state of the art “Duncan Lodge” secure unit with plans for a Sensory Garden for residents of that unit.

Research has shown that there is a definite opportunity for sensory stimulation through access to external, multidimensional spaces. Gardens where people suffering from Alzheimer’s and other forms of dementia can smell and touch flowers and herbs, grow vegetables or fruit, and experience different textures and sounds – or simply get a breath of fresh air in an atmosphere conducive to rest and relaxation.

We would value your support to make this Sensory Garden happen.

HOW YOU CAN HELP WITH OUR PROJECT:

The establishment of a Sensory Garden specifically for our Dementia Unit residents will provide a wonderful asset and be one of the first of its kind in New Zealand.

As a charitable trust (operating since 1898), we are dependent on sponsorship and donations to take our project beyond the initial planning stages (for which we have already received generous personal sponsorship). We would value your contribution, either by post or in person:
